

Washington University in St. Louis GRADUATE STUDY in CLASSICS

The Department of Classics at Washington University in St. Louis invites applications to its M.A. and Ph.D. programs. For individuals with a strong undergraduate foundation in Latin and Greek, the M.A. degree is a solid basis for further graduate study in Classics and related fields. The Ph.D. trains candidates for careers in research and teaching on the Classical world, and Washington University's program offers optional special tracks in Ancient Music, Performance, History, and Philosophy. Ph.D. candidates are fully funded with tuition remission and generous fellowships. M.A. students also receive full tuition remission; for information on additional funding, please contact the Director of Graduate Studies.

The Department of Classics also cooperates with Washington University's Department of Education to mentor students who choose to pursue the Latin track of the M.A.T. program administered by the Department of Education.

In addition to listed Department Faculty, numerous associated Faculty in Philosophy, History, Performing Arts and other areas participate in our graduate programs and Classics community.

Students will enjoy not just the resources of the Washington University campus, but also the inexpensive living and the vibrant arts and recreation scene of the city of St. Louis.

A full description of the Department's degree programs, with lists of Affiliated Faculty, can be found at classics.artsci.wustl.edu/graduate

For print materials and information on the application process, contact Amelia Goldsby, Administrator:

classics@wustl.edu

Faculty

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR NICOLA ARAVECCHIA

Greco-Roman art and archaeology; Late Antique Egyptian art and archaeology

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR WILLIAM BUBELIS

Greek history and historiography; the ancient economy and Greek social history; the Attic orators; Greek religion; epigraphy and numismatics; the ancient Near East

PROFESSOR CATHERINE KEANE (CHAIR)

Roman poetry and poetics; satiric genres; Greek and Roman drama; ancient literary criticism

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR TOM KEELINE

Latin literature; ancient education and scholarship; lexicography, metrics, and textual criticism

JOHN AND PENELOPE BIGGS DISTINGUISHED

PROFESSOR OF CLASSICS TIMOTHY MOORE

Greek and Roman theatre; Roman historiography; Classical reception; ancient music

ASSISTANT PROFESSOR LUIS SALAS

Greek and Roman medicine and philosophy; intellectual history; ancient psychological theories; philosophy of language

ASSOCIATE PROFESSOR ZOE STAMATOPOULOU (DIRECTOR OF GRADUATE STUDIES)

archaic and classical Greek poetry; the symposium; Plutarch; the reception of archaic Greece in imperial Greek literature

For details about the program and requirements, contact Zoe Stamatopoulou:

zoe.stamatopoulou@wustl.edu