Greco-Roman Roots of Modern Scientific Racism and White Supremacism

Thursday, November 18th
6:00 PM CDT

A Virtual Lecture by Rebecca Futo Kennedy,
Associate Professor of Classics, Women’s and Gender Studies, and Environmental Studies at Denison University; Director of the Denison Museum

Rebecca Futo Kennedy’s research interests include the intellectual, political, and social history of Classical Athens, Athenian tragedy, and identity formation (both gender/sexuality and race/ethnicity) and immigration in the ancient world. She is the author most recently of Immigrant Women in Athens: Gender, Ethnicity, and Citizenship in the Classical City (Routledge, 2014) and editor of the Handbook to Identity and the Environment in the Classical and Medieval Worlds (with M. Jones-Lewis; Routledge, 2015). She is a translator and editor (with S. Roy and M. Goldman) of Race and Ethnicity in the Classical World: An Anthology of Primary Sources (Hackett, 2013) and editor of the The Companion to the Reception of Aeschylus (Brill 2017). She is currently writing a book on race and ethnicity in antiquity and its entanglements in modern white supremacy and is co-translating a sourcebook of ancient texts on women in ancient Greece and Rome.

For more details and to register, visit classics.wustl.edu or scan the QR code