Monographs in Progress

1. Breathing, Haunted Air. Studies the nature of Whiteness in twentieth- and twenty-first literature by White authors and practices decolonial ways of reading. The tentative title refers both to “I can’t breathe” and breathing as resistance as well as Whiteness as an environment rather than only to a discrete identity. The comma indicates a pause, to breathe and to resist.
2. Gramscian Theories and Feminist Praxis. Traces new formations of ‘subaltern’ and ‘organic intellectuals’ through the matrices of nationhoods, gendering, and racializations in international and transnational contexts, framed in socialist feminist terms.
