Call for Submissions: Undergraduate and Graduate History Papers
Tufts Historical Review – Volume X

PAPERS DUE BY 31 JANUARY 2017

The Tufts Historical Review Editorial Board and the Journal's Board of Advisers are delighted to announce a call for submissions to Volume X of the Tufts Historical Review, an academic journal of global history.

This year, our journal will be centered around the theme of Legends. From the golden expanses of El Dorado to the battlefield of Kosovo Polje, legends fundamentally shape our history.

But what exactly constitutes legend?

Is it Eva Perón's cultural legacy as a revered revolutionary figure in the image of Mary Magdalene? Is it George Washington's leadership of Colonial troops during the American Revolution, or Saigō Takamori's last stand against the overwhelming forces of the Japanese Imperial Army? Or perhaps it is Johannes Gutenberg's introduction of the movable printing press to Europe, or even the founding of Rome by Romulus and Remus?

The search for answers, ultimately, falls on us as historians.

The Tufts Historical Review is committed to publishing the finest undergraduate and graduate historical research. As such, we require that all submissions subscribe to the highest standards of academic quality. Failure to comply with the following requirements may result in the rejection of a submission.

• All submissions must be cited in accordance with the Chicago Manual of Style, 16th Edition
• No submissions that have previously appeared in another publication will be considered eligible
• A cover page should be attached to each submission, and it should include the title of the paper, the author's name, email, and university affiliation
• Applicant's information should only appear on the cover page
• Submissions should range between 2,500 and 8,000 words. Longer submissions are acceptable, but will be subject to editing for purposes of brevity, if selected
• Submissions from both undergraduate (B.A.) and graduate (M.A., PhD.) students are welcomed
• Please note that submissions need not explicitly reference the word "legends" to be eligible for consideration. We encourage novel treatments of the theme!

The Tufts Historical Review is one of the few undergraduate-led journals of its kind in the United States. A highly selective publication intended to recognize outstanding student work in history and the humanities, the Tufts Historical Review is distributed to the libraries of leading research institutions, including Harvard University, Brown University, Oxford University, the College of William and Mary, and Georgetown University. Alongside an active student board of undergraduate and graduate students, the Tufts Historical Review works closely in conjunction an advisory board including renowned scholars, such as Tufts University President Anthony Monaco.

All submissions must be emailed as word documents (.docx) to tuftshistoricalreview@gmail.com by 31 January 2017 for review by the editorial board of the Tufts Historical Review. For more information, please visit us online at http://ase.tufts.edu/pandp/historicalreview/.

We look forward to reading your submission!

Nate Chock & Rebecca Ennis
Editors-in-Chief, Tufts Historical Review, 2016-2017